From Carole McCulloch-"Share Jesus Without Fear": Witnessing should not be--but many times is--a fearful experience. Most of us who love Jesus with all our hearts know that we are approaching a loved one or an acquaintance or even a stranger with the most important message they will ever hear in this life. We are so afraid we will say the wrong thing and offend; or that maybe they will ask us questions that we cannot adequately answer. So, many times, we just keep our mouths shut and miss the opportunity to witness to them. For some, it may be their last opportunity; for others, it may be the first time anyone has witnessed to them personally. Just how can we approach our personal witness to others with new zeal and new confidence? Most committed Christians would love to know the answer to this question.

Even though I have witnessed throughout my life and I have been taught several different approaches, the most natural and best one for me personally has been Bill Fay's "Share Jesus Without Fear." Since I have been using this method, I have felt the presence of the Holy Spirit more so than ever before, and I believe that it is so because this simple approach does just what it says: it takes out a lot of my fear, and it gives me extra confidence and passion.

From Richard Gay: One of our goals at Lifelines is to teach people how to share their faith. Bill Fay's "Share Jesus Without Fear" is so easy to use. We are training people using this material and then providing them with the opportunity to practice what they have learned. It is so exciting to see someone witness and then that person accepts Christ. If you are interested in learning "Share Jesus Without Fear" give us a call!

Cody Kern has agreed to start a Bible Study at Bongo Java Coffee House off the Belmont Campus. He will be teaching a book called "Crazy Love" by Francis Chan. Scott Allen, at FBC Nashville, will help us with publicity on the Vanderbilt and Belmont Campuses. We hope we can begin others with BSU leadership at Vanderbilt. Cody is our test model to multiply these Bible Studies to other locations such as Fido's and Starbucks to reach the unchurched college students. We continue to get new leadership each week. Dago and Alicia Maldonado have begun working in the homeless ministry on Saturday's. Also we want to welcome Andrea Burkeen to the food and clothes ministry!
